

Best Practices of the Department

The Department adopts innovative and participatory practices to make language learning engaging, practical, and student-friendly.

1. Pick and Speak

Students are given a topic and encouraged to speak spontaneously for a specified duration. This activity helps develop confidence, fluency, vocabulary, pronunciation, and public-speaking skills.

2. Learning English through Advertisements

Advertisements are used as authentic learning resources to develop students' vocabulary, comprehension, creativity, communication skills, and awareness of contemporary language use.

3. Newspaper Reading

Regular newspaper reading is encouraged to improve reading comprehension, vocabulary, pronunciation, general awareness, and critical engagement with current issues.

4. Vocabulary Building through Newspapers

Students identify new words from newspapers, understand their meanings and usage, and use them in sentences. This practice helps expand vocabulary and improve functional English.
